Prasar Bharati collaborates with AWS to scale its digital news services

Chennai, Sept 2: Amazon Web Services, Inc.(AWS), an Amazon.com, Inc. company today announced that Prasar Bharati News Services (PBNS), the digital arm of India's public broadcasting service Prasar Bharati, is using AWS to host and scale its expansive network, which offers over 240 live radio channels, including live news and entertainment programs. By moving to AWS, PBNS has the compute capacity, reliability, and scalability to deliver news seamlessly to over 894 million viewers and listeners in more than 190 countries. Through this digital transformation, PBNS aims to provide innovative digital content formats and better engage its target audience, especially younger viewers and listeners. "At Prasar Bharati News Services, we have a responsibility to provide timely and accurate news. We inform and educate the public about India's development and cultural diversity. AWS is instrumental to PBNS's digital transformation roadmap, helping us reach existing and new audiences, who consume content digitally," said Samir Kumar, Head, PBNS and Digital Platform, PrasarBharati. Prior to moving to AWS, PBNS hosted its applications with a colocation IT provider and experienced high latency, which caused performance and availability issues, such as website downtime and disrupted video streaming. This significantly affected the distribution of news and the audience experience. PBNS needed a comprehensive set of cloud capabilities, from scalable compute and storage resources to content production, management, and archiving, to transform the way it delivers content, such as live-streaming content and sharing videos across platforms like YouTube.
